READER, PLEASE TO OBSERVE,

I. THE calculations of this Almanack are made to solar or apparent time, to which, for the mean or clock time, apply the equation given in the sixth column, adding, when the sun is slow, and subtracting when fast.

II. The time of high water at Philadelphia is so computed as to serve for either morning or afternoon, nearly enough for common use; the morning flood being about 12 m. earlier than the time in the tide column, and that of the afternoon as much later; but when there happens one flood only in the day, the true time is given, and distinguished by this mark.*

III. The sun's declination is carefully fitted to the meridian of Philadelphia for every noon of the present year.

IV. The rising, setting, or southing of a star may be carried several days backward by adding, or forward by subtracting, 4 m. per day: for instance; on the 11th of the first month (January) Sirius is south at 3 m. past 11; adding 12 m. for 3 days sooner, we have 11 h. 15 m. for the southing on the 8th, and deducting 8 m. for 2 later, leaves 10 h. 55 m. for that of the 13th of the same month, &c.

V. The time of Alioth's passage over the meridian, or when a plumb line apparently cuts both the Pole star and Alioth, is given, for the first six months above, and the last six below, the pole, to five days in every month, and may be readily known for any day by the preceding note. These two stars will be visibly coincident with a level east and west line at 5 h. 59 m. before or after Alioth passes the meridian, by which we may regulate time-pieces to a minute, or tell the time without them. The Pole-star is on the meridian five minutes later than Alioth, when a true meridian line may be drawn by it, and the magnetic variation thereby determined.

Alioth is the first star in the tail of the Great-Bear, viz. that next the square, or, it is the third star of the seven, commonly called the Waggon, or Plough, counting toward those two of them denominated the Pointers.

Thoughts on Detraction.

THERE are many men possessed with a notion, false and absurd as it is, the detraction of other people's reputation, is the building of their own; that with good qualities they have, or would thought to have, will be rendered void. Aquarius, Legs.

To know where the Sign is. First find the day of the month, and against it the sign or place of the moon, in the eighth column. Then finding the sign here, it shews the part of the body it is said to govern.

We have inserted the above, and the prognostics of the weather, according to the most approved methods; but think it proper to inform our readers, that, in this enlightened age, the learned put but little confidence in them.

Thoughts on Detraction.

THERE are many men possessed of a notion, false and absurd as it is, that the detraction of other people's reputation is the building of their own; that whatever good qualities they have, or would be thought to have, will be rendered more conspicuous, by throwing a shade over those of others: But this is so far from answering the purpose aimed at, that it often gives to the hearer a suspicion, that the person who is so fond of expatiating on the faults and follies of his neighbour, does it only with a view of drawing off any attention to his own.

This mean and ungenerous spirit, these ill-natured humours, this fiend-like disposition, are so extremely base and absurd, that if strong instances were not seen daily through life, it would be almost impossible for a man of sense to believe them. For my part, I would not be thought outrageously virtuous: I have foibles, and many:
but if I am totally free from any of the common weaknesses of mankind, I take it to be this—I trouble myself about no man's business that does not concern me: nor do I ever lessen the reputation of any person, without reason, and when I do, it is in the face of day, openly and without disguise:
for I think no man or set of men ought to FEBRUARY. Second Month.

Would equipage, splendor. or noble descent
 Bring comfort wherever they fall;—
 Could these add a drop to the cup of content,
 I'd gladly partake of them all.
 But vain the assistance, that riches bestow,
 The raptures that beauty imparts,
 To soften the painful reflections of woe,
 Or banish distress from our hearts.

ascend the judgment seat of fame, or dare to use the whip of censure, without being armed with the social virtues, justice and humanity, which the generality of rigid censurers are destitute of. And were the parties defamed to reverse the mirror, the sons of calumny would be ashamed of their blackness, and shudder at their own deformity. Many learned and eminent authors have taught us, that the seat of that ever detestable vice, calumny, is solely lodged in the breasts of people of mean and servile dispositions: while, on the other hand, the foundation of those virtues, justice and humanity, so very necessary to render society perfect, are only found with generous and disinterested minds, the truth of which is very plainly evidenced in every action of human life.

Observations upon Gaming.

GAMING is a vice to which, perhaps, not very many in this country are addicted. However, to those who are not guilty of it, there may be some use in expatiating upon it, that their aversion to it may be continued. There may be also some pleasure in reflecting upon the evils and troubles which those suffer, who practise this vice, from which we escape through our virtue. It is agreeable says a certain author, upon the sea-shore, to see others who are vexed in a tempest—not that it is pleasing that our fellow creatures should be afflicted—but that we should escape from the evils before our eyes.

It is observed, that gaming is seldom pursued with moderation. It is a fascinating and domineering passion. As the serpent of Aaron swallowed up every other serpent, so does this extirpate every other passion. The gamester neglects the calls of love and friendship. The desire of fame and of knowledge, health and time, and honour, and all that is valuable to men, are sacrificed to his love of play. It is mentioned by some authors, that some of the Germans were formerly so addicted to this vice, that they would even venture their personal freedom, when they were bereft of every thing else, and upon losing, would patiently and quietly suffer themselves to be bound and sold as slaves. There are two causes of the injury of health from the pursuit of this passion; continual anxiety, and late hours. It is not unusual for gamesters to continue whole nights as well as days at play. It is remarkable that gamesters are the worst paymasters in the world, except in gaming-debts, which they call debts of honour. Men, who risk hundreds upon the throw of a die, in Europe, are often arrested for trivial sums.

APRIL. Fourth Month.

For fortune, be honor her portion assign'd;
 For beauty, bright health's rosy bloom;
 Let justice and candour ennoble her mind,
 And cheerfulness sorrow consume;
 Thus form'd, would she share, with me, life's little store,
 It's mixture of pleasure and smart,
 She'd ever continue, till both were no more,
 The constant delight of my heart.

This reluctance to pay their honest creditors, arises from the desire of having ready money always at hand, which is a necessary passport to the gaming table. Here, therefore, true honour is set aside for that which is in a great measure imaginary. It appears to me, that a gamester is unworthy of public or private trust; that he should not be an attorney, or a trustee, or an officer of the state. Those, who know mankind, know that there are frequent instances of gamesters losing the money that has been entrusted in their hands by others for various purposes. A man addicted to gaming, can be regular to no appointment, can give the necessary attention to no business whatever. The temptation alleged by many persons of fortune, to gaming, is, that it kills time.

There is one very bad effect of gaming, which I never have found observed by any writer on the subject, which is, that it has a tendency to harden the heart. I remember once to have heard a great gamester say (he was a man who chiefly supported himself by the profits arising from play) that his foolish pity to his friends, had made him forbear many advantages which he could have reaped, and that he was determined in future to spare no man. It is almost unnecessary to observe, that it is our duty to keep the heart tender and susceptible of the afflictions of others. It is the language of inspiration that when the Almighty is willing to work a reformation, he is represented as saying, "I will take away the heart of stone, and give you a heart of flesh." A feeling mind may be esteemed in many respects a great blessing. It contains a great inclination to virtue. For if we feel for the misery of others, we shall unwillingly cause that misery. It is incumbent upon us, however, to guard against what is really a foolish pity, and to keep our sensibility always under the direction of reason.

Another bad consequence of gaming is, that it introduces us to the worst company. The gaming table, like the grave, has been well said to level all distinctions. Bad company makes us unhappy; it makes us infamous; and if we do not take care, it will soon make us wicked. There is a fine print upon the subject of gaming, by the ingenious Hogarth—The prince of the blood and the nobleman are there represented (and perhaps this part of the picture is taken from real life) with highwaymen and sharpers. Some of the miseries, which gaming produces, are there inimitably described, and, above all, the insensibility to the duties and the proper cares of life; for the watchmen are thundering out, that the house is on fire, and no gamester, being all fastened to the object of their wishes, will attend to remove the danger.

It appears to be foolish in a man who is not thoroughly well versed in the games at which he plays, and who is not always cool and sober, to enter into gaming societies. For the loss of his property must in a little time be the consequence of such a conduct. But honest skill in play, with a possession of temper and constant sobriety, will not always avail to keep a man from ruin. For it is well known that sleight-of-hand men, can give such lessons as to enable any man of dexterity to deceive even good players.

A gaming table has a great tendency to produce the most dangerous quarrels even among friends. It is certainly expected in polite circles, that the greatest temper should be observed in winning and losing. But still we find among gamesters of all conditions, disputes, or duels. In short gaming has filled the world with tragedies; for not only duelling, but suicide, in high life, and robbery in lower life, are often the consequences of this fatal passion. It is, therefore, our duty to guard against any, the most trivial, inclination to this vice; as a prudent man would not wish to lose his own money, and an honest man would not wish to gain improperly the money of others.

contract an idea of their indolence or ingratitude, while they ought to blame themselves for mistaking the capacity or disposition of those whom they favored—no man being indiscriminately qualified for every thing which may offer. This consequence however, shews the fatal inconvenience of having, through mismanagement, forfeited the power to choose that vocation in life for which we feel ourselves calculated; and that by indolently resigning ourselves to the guidance of our stars (if such an expression may be tolerated) we of course lay ourselves open to those unfortunate emergencies that so constantly attend those who place too confident and implicit a reliance upon the friendship and benevolence of others. Such a behaviour may well be likened to that of one, who, though possessed of his sight, should require the assistance of a conductor, and imagine that without him he should not be able to find his way with security.

The Advantage of Conversation.

CONVERSATION is an advantage peculiar to man, as well as reason: It is the band of society, and by it the commerce of civil life is kept up; the mind communicates its thoughts, and the heart freely expresses its inclinations; in short, friendship is contracted and kept up by the same means.  With false applause and senseless prate;
 And while the vaunts of self they hold—
 And while th' unmeaning tale is told;
 Anna shall wish the folly o'er,
 Shall fly to mem'ry's valu'd store;
 There fondly trace her childish age,
 And call to mind the virgin page.

In a word, man is so far born to be sociable, that this quality is no less essential to him than reason; to fly from company, is to act against the intention of nature; to live always in solitude, one must be something more than man, or less than brute: Immoderate study begets a grossness in his mind, and vitiates his sentiments; the conversation of friends must refine and assist him. It is no common blessing to meet with a faithful, sensible, discreet friend; faithful to conceal nothing from us; sensible to remark our faults; and discreet to reprehend us for them; but to be able to believe and follow advice, is the perfection of happiness. It frequently happens, that we take a pride in following our own conceits, like those travellers that lose their way, for want of taking a guide, or inquiring the road.

A Composition for the Cure of Diseases, Defects, and Injuries in all kinds of Fruit and Forest Trees, invented and practised by William Forsyth, Gardener to the King of Great-Britain.

ONE bushel of fresh cow dung, half a bushel of lime rubbish from old buildings, (that from the ceiling of old rooms is preferable) half a bushel of wood ashes, and 1-16th of a bushel of pit or river sand; the three last articles are to be sifted fine before they are mixed, then worked together well with a spade, and afterwards with a wooden beater, until the stuff is very smooth, like fine plaster used for the ceiling of rooms.

All the dead, decayed, and injured part of the tree must be cut away to the fresh sound wood, leaving the surface very level, and rounding off the edges of the bark perfectly smooth. Lay on the plaster about 1-8th of an inch thick, all over the part so cut away, finishing off the edges as thin as possible. Take a quantity of dry powder of wood ashes, with 1-6th of the ashes of burnt bones; put it into a tin box, with holes in the top, and shake the powders on the surface of the plaster, until the whole is covered with it, letting it remain for half an hour, to absorb the moisture; then apply more powder, rubbing it on gently with the hand, and repeating the application of the powder, until the whole plaster becomes a dry, smooth surface.

In all trees cut down near the ground, the dry powder should have an equal quantity of powder of alabaster mixed with it, in order the better to resist the dripping of trees and heavy rains.

Where old rubbish cannot be got, substitute pounded chalk, or common lime, after having been slacked a month at least.

When the edges of the plaster are raised up next the bark, care should be taken to rub it over with the finger, especially when moistened by rain, to prevent the air and wet from penetrating into the wound.

The effects of this composition have been enquired into by the commissioners of the land revenue, in Great Britain, and a respectable committee of both houses of parliament; ten of whom viewed the trees which Mr. Forsyth has undertaken to renovate; and were so well satisfied, that the king granted a reward to Mr. Forsyth for disclosing the method of making and using the composition as above.

D E C E M B E R. Twelfth Month.

What tho' to urge my stay's exerted
 The eloquence of Greece and Rome?
 My steady purpose, not diverted,
 Still resolutely leads me home.
 Ye tranquil gates again receive me,
 Once more your truant wanderer's come;
 From future calls kind fate relieve me
 And ne'er again I'll quit my home.

Medical Virtues of the common stinging Nettle.

IT has long been my sentiment, that the most common gifts of Providence are the most useful, salutary and worthy of estimation. To prove that this opinion has not been ill founded, I will, at present, apply it to only one instance, of which I can speak with great confidence.

The common stinging nettle, apparently as usefess and troublesome a plant as any that has been stigmatized with the name of weed, is one of the most efficacious medicines we have in the vegetable kingdom: in the form of a strong decoction, or infusion, taken in the quantity of a pint in a day, it is a most valuable strengthener of general or partial relaxation. In that of a weak decoction or infusion, it proves an admirable alterative and deobstruent, in impurities of the blood, and in obstructions of the vessels. And in that of expressed juices, taken by spoonfuls, as the exigency of the case requires, it is the most powerful styptic in internal bleedings, known. Externally applied, as a fomentation or poultice, it amazingly discusses inflammation, and resolves swellings. In the common sore throat, thus applied, and internally, as a gargle, great dependence may safely be put in this common plant. I have been witness to its great efficacy therein in many instances.
